

RE-ENTRY

THE HOME COMING MISSIONARY

“Can a sending church ... be a successful receiving one”?

This small, practical, 34 page booklet is a resource for churches and individuals, helping those adjusting to life in their home country after mission service, and enabling them to become active and fruitful members of their church and community.

However, even though it is written primarily for churches, missionaries have also found it helpful.

"The hardest experience of our 16 years as a family in Papua New Guinea was leaving and coming back to Australia. We had changed, Australia had changed, and our friends and family had been managing quite well without us! We had three children born overseas, so Australia was definitely not home for them! We left behind fellow workers and a ministry we loved. The re-entry process was a very painful journey, and often we felt that no one understood our experience."

"This little book by Helen Macnaughtan is a great help for the local church in understanding and caring for the home coming missionary. I trust that it will mean that the re-entry process for many missionaries will be made easier through the understanding, love and care of their local church."
